Each question carries 100 marks.

1.

Wealth Shares by Wealth Percentile from 2001-2016

Source: Federal Reserve Bulletin, September 2017 Survey of Consumer Finances.

Community Psychology's focus on social justice is due to the recognition that many of our social problems are perpetuated when resources are disproportionately allocated throughout our society (see above figure); this causes social and economic inequalities such as poverty, homelessness, underemployment and unemployment, and crime. Albee (1986) has concluded that societal factors such as unemployment, racism, sexism, and exploitation are the major causes of mental illness.

Discuss second-order change strategies, which would address the systems and structures causing the above stated problems.

2. Examine the ecological framework for understanding resilience and coping.
3. Using Kelly's Ecological metaphor, explain the pandemic of suicide amongst university students.
4. Using the Roseto Mystery phenomenon, explain the possible causes of certain communities' resistance to particular pandemics.
5. Describe the various types of participation and justify one which is most suitable in dealing with HIV and AIDS issues.
